George W. Perkins of New York, the steel trust, life insurance company and many other things, is dead. They say "he left no legacies to philanthropy."
They are mistaken. He left $50,000 cash and six thousand a year for life to his wife. In 1917, a woman who worked for him faithfully for twenty-seven years, he gave her a small pension. To her loyalty, integrity and ability unswerving, the Perkins heirs owe several of the millions that they got from Mr. Perkins.

Some cause in Perkins' will, calculated to make business men realize what they owe to women, usually poorly paid, in real contribution to philanthropy, and, what is more, a contribution to JUSTICE, far more important than any philanthropy.

Volstead, father of the thirty law, is beaten for re-nomination to Congress. This may be the little thing that will make him a man, but it will not make him a man, or it may not.

Mr. Burleson, Postmaster-General, calls for "more reasonable interpretation of the Constitutional amendment," which means a call for beer. Some say this is the voice of Wilson speaking through Burleson, but it isn't. Mr. Burleson has been saying it for years.

Somebody proposes to make a reprint paper from alfalfa. It can be done, but why waste alfalfa? Feed that to cattle; feed wood pulp to the printing press. Proper care and replanting of alfalfa will solve the lumber and wood pulp problem forever. They understand that in Germany, where they have more good trees than they had one hundred years ago.

War is a hard teacher, but has done more than peace to educate the world. The latest teaching is to Italy. They wondered what to do with the explosives left over. They used on the soil of Italy, instead of on the soil of Germany, these explosives digging up the ground to a great depth, poisoning the soil, letting in oxygen, making it easy for the roots to grow down, will increase food supply and simplify agriculture.

The Italians note that use of all the old stock of explosives to make fields more fertile, but cut down the manufacture of explosives for agricultural purposes.

As useful a man as any living in Canada, Sir John A. Macdonald, makes his last journey to the earth and a fonder of men.

Some day perhaps the world will set a monument to the unknown hero of the silent age, that working through generations, century, gradually made the world a better place. It was he, the unknown hero, that fed the world, before the beginning of history as we know it.

"War in Ireland" in London Headlines

London, June 24.—The British press has dropped all camouflage and now openly refers to "The War in Ireland." The Daily Herald, organ of the labor party, carries a standing headline:

"Irish War News," under which it prints stories of fighting between Sinn Feiners and British soldiers and Sinn Feiners and their kindred.

The Morning Post and other leading London dailies now regularly refer to Irish hostilities as actual warfare.

conference of the labor party today.

An executive resolution was adopted, calling for free and absolute self-determination in Ireland and withdrawal of the British troops.

It proposed that the officials of Dublin County be given indefinite leave of absence and that government affairs in the meantime, be placed in the hands of the Irish nation.

After stormy debate the resolution was withdrawn, although there were loud cries of dissent. It was explained that the resolution was called to clarify the form of Irish government which labor stands for.

Some of the leaders believed that the resolution portended a setback for the Sinn Fein in the conference.

Thermorator Iceless Refrigerators WE CONTROL THIS MAKE IN BOSTON

"It seems too good to be true," was the verdict rendered by customer a few days ago, while watching a demonstration being given of this really wonderful invention. "No ice, no chemicals and NO expense—why, it seems like a dream fulfilled." Of course the principal use for the refrigerator is in the home, but it is also quite ideal for keeping things cool in the Summer bungalow or camp, where an ordinary ice-holding refrigerator is not always available.

An expert attendant will demonstrate and give you valuable information on the good advantages of using this practicable innovation, which is without question one of the season's most unique examples. On display in our great House Furnishing Section, Second Floor, Annex.

WILL PUSH COAL PROSECUTIONS

Palmer Declares Anti-Profiters Campaign Must Go the Limit

Washington, June 24.—The Department of Justice's drive against profiteers of soft coal operators will be pushed to the limit. This was made plain in a formal statement issued by the department, giving further reasons for Attorney General Palmer's instructions to all United States attorneys to secure indictments of operators charging unreasonable high prices for coal. The statement today goes into great detail to show that "the cost of production could not possibly justify the reported prices at the mines," which are given at from $7 to $11 a ton, "and in some instances even higher."

Prosecutions, it is declared, will be made under the Labor Food and Fuel Act, which prohibits the taking of an unreasonable profit.

BOSTON TRAIN IN CRASH

Trainmen and Passengers Hurt in Collision and Derailment on New Haven

Many passengers were shaken up and two trainmen seriously injured when the "owl" train from New York to Boston was derailed outside Hartford, Ct., at 2:40 today. The derailment occurred when the engine of the "owl" train, which is No. 20, derailed at a coal car on the Flower street tracks at Hartford. The engine was derailed, and turned partly over, the baggage and mail cars left the rails, and windows were broken in the coaches and sleepers by the fall. The trainmen, both of whom were taken to St. Francis Hospital, were Engineer R. Grey of Springfield, broken, abrasions and shock. Fireman Daniel Bailey of Springfield, broken left leg, shock and contusions. The engine was late in reaching Boston, and traffic over the Hartford division was greatly delayed during the entire morning as a result of the crash.

SHOE MEN FACE LOCKOUT

3,500 Haverhill Workers Face Ultimatum; 65 Factories May Shut Down
Haverhill, June 24.—Thirty-five hundred cutters, packers and wood workers voted unanimously to reject the ultimatum of the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association in regard to a change in wages and working conditions.

This means that all but a few of the workers in the sixty-five factories controlled by members of that association have refused to accept the employers' request for abolition of the eight-hour day and the 48-hour week, and a reduction in piece-work prices. The cutters, the last trade in shoe making, are the only ones who have refused to accept the ultimatum, and they are the only ones who are being locked out.

The shoe workers' protective union, of which the employees are members, has a total membership in this city of more than 18,000. About half of this number are organized in the union, and the other half are in sympathy with the union.

'Automobile Spooner' Is Fined $15

A campaign against "automobile spooning" on the Metropolitan Turnpike resulted in a fine of $15 for a driver of a 1919 Buick. The driver was fined for driving his automobile to stand on the turnpike.

In the same court two men were fined $15 each for over-speeding, and another was fined $5 for not properly setting the brakes on his machine.

McADOO DENIES HE HAS TUBERCULOUS THROAT

New York, June 24.—At the office of William Gibbs McAdoo today it was said there was no truth in a report printed by David Lawrence in the Evening World that the former Secretary of the Treasury gave up an ambition to be Democratic nominee for the presidency because he had tuberculosis of the throat. Lawrence speculated on the possibility that McAdoo had withdrawn for one of two reasons: the advice of his physician, or the personal wish of his father-in-law, President Wilson.

It would be impossible for me to publicly characterize such doubtful methods. Your children need Father John's medicine. Pure food time. No Alcohol or Dangerous Drugs.

ARE YOUR DOLLARS WORKING?

Industry has been revolutionized by the great war. The world demands greater production and better quality products, and is willing to pay almost any price to procure them. There is no other country so fitted to fill the demands of trade as America—but we must have more and larger factories in order to increase the supply of finished products. To build factories requires capital, and as the banks are already doing all that they can for industry, we must go to the people for finance and pay a liberal price for it.

A HARVEST FOR INVESTORS

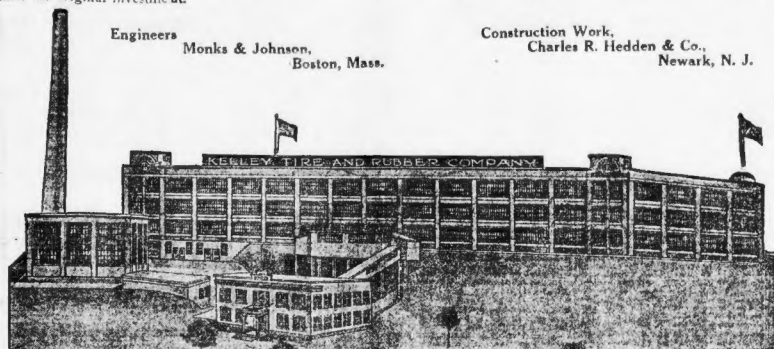

The World War, which worked so many other great changes, brought about an increase in the investor class from a few hundred thousands to several millions in number. People who never knew what thrift was are now fortunate owners of Liberty Bonds and other securities. They now have an opportunity of subscribing to a stock that may properly be described as of phenomenal promise. They can now buy it at a price that allows them to secure ten, twenty or thirty shares for a relatively small outlay, and they have the prospect of seeing their investment increased in value as other rubber stocks have done until it is worth many times the original investment.

B. & M. R. R. DEFILES NEW UNION OF EMPLOYEES

Taking a view apparently the opposite of that expressed five days ago by the Supreme Court of the State of New York, the management of the Boston & Maine Railroad has notified those of its members who belong to the American Federation of Railroad Workers that the B. & M. does not recognize that organization, and that if there are things they want to talk over with the management they must speak through the American Federation of Labor or come forward as individuals.

President William J. Davis and Recording Secretary E. E. Henry of the Federation of Railroad Workers, speaking today at Pittsburgh, declared the attitude of the Boston & Maine to be contrary to law—as outlined in the recent New York decision violation of the rules laid down by the Federal Railroad Labor Board and "rank discrimination."

Notice that the Boston & Maine will deal with "any organization" and that one of the A. F. of L. has been advised upon the Pittsburgh railroads in a printed letter over the signature of Assistant General Manager J. C. Coleman. Coleman writes, in part:

THREATENS DRASTIC ACTION.

"The position of the management is that it has no right to, and therefore cannot authorize two committees of two different organizations representing the same classes of men, that a majority belong to one organization the regular committee of such organization—in this case committee of the American Federation of Labor—is the only one the management may meet, but if any employee does not desire to be represented by this committee he may take any matter up with the management through the regular channel as an individual."

"Told advised differently by the Railroad Labor Board, the officials of the Boston & Maine Railroad can meet the committee of the American Federation of Railroad Workers, and members of that committee will not be granted leave of absence for the purpose of carrying on business in connection with that organization with other employees of the company in the company's time."

"But I can tell you one thing," said Beattie, "and that is that there are no I. W. W. among us and nothing of the kind in our constitution."

From Public Document No. 122 Beattie quoted a rule of the Federal Railroad Labor Board that each Adjustment Board shall receive for hearing, and decide, any dispute involving organizing, rules or working conditions: (1) upon the application of the chief executive of any organization of employees, (2) upon the written petition of not less than 100 organized employees, and (3) "upon the request of any individual."

"Rather than engage in a controversy with the officials of the road," said Henry, "we sent in a petition as 'unorganized' employees. If men are compelled to go forward as individuals it will be at a financial loss because of the length of time and the number of those he is compelled to leave his work."

CASES NOT ANALOGOUS.

The New York case dealt with the alleged encroachment of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America upon the United Garment Workers of America, an A. F. of L. organization. In the suit against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America for a permanent injunction and treble damages, Justice Brandegee held that "no labor union has the right to make itself into a labor monopoly."

In the New York case, two big labor organizations were fighting each other. There is no suggestion of such a situation in the Boston & Maine Railroad matter and the Massachusetts controversy is in almost every other respect unlike the Beattie-Henry case. The position taken by the Boston & Maine management, if it is carried out, is to constitute the A. F. of L. a "labor monopoly."

Marriage Intentions

LAWRENCE J. BULLOCK, 28, engineer, 11 Cedar Street, and MARY E. BULLOCK, 28, teacher, 28 State Street, both of Boston, were married last night at the home of Mrs. J. C. Coleman, 121 West 1st Street, by Rev. J. C. Coleman, 121 West 1st Street, Boston.

Use Cocoon Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be sure you wash it with Cocoon Oil.

Most modern and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Stimulated coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely germless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Use one or two teaspoonfuls until you feel an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather comes out easily and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff, and coarseness, and it leaves it soft and silky, bright, healthy and in beautiful condition.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil, which is the best for washing hair, in very cheap and in all sizes in the family for months—Advertisement.

Mexico in Revolution

IV. MEXICO'S SORROW (Continued).

Unfortunately, however, Don Venustiano has trained a school and created a revolution in Mexico. All who are to follow him have learned the lesson that "the incident must be cultivated."

As new disputes arise with the United States, their solutions will be deferred as long as possible that somebody may be able to pose as the savior of his country.

If it seems generally agreed that the incident must be cultivated

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

- (1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
- (2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
- (3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
- (4) To elect Federal Judges, including the Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
- (5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

Intolerance and the League of Nations

We have received a letter from a citizen of Massachusetts who asks us why he should not communicate with the delegates to the National Democratic Convention from his district to the effect that the progress of time and the revelations of facts which time has made puts the League of Nations, with reservations or without reservations, beyond the pale.

This gentleman says that he was first for the League of Nations, then he was for reservations, and that now he is AGAINST THE LEAGUE, BAG AND BAGGAGE.

We see no objection to his communicating whatever he pleases to his delegates.

Indeed, it is his clear duty to make known his opinion, if he has one, for it is the duty of the delegates to represent the public opinion of their district.

With respect to the league with reservations, it must be said that since those reservations were adopted by the Senate, or at least since they were agreed upon by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, we have learned so much of the spirit which will control the league and we have seen so much of its helplessness to aid peace, that it stands revealed as a farce which adds insult to the injury which England and France are doing to the world today by their imperialism.

Out of the mouths of the most prominent advocates of the league in Europe, and indeed out of the mouth of the very author of the league, comes its condemnation.

Lord Robert Cecil is admitted on all sides to be the coming statesman of England—probably the next Prime Minister. He has been for a long time a sincere advocate of the league.

It has always hurt him to hear the House of Commons laugh and jeer whenever the Prime Minister, Lloyd George, mentioned the league, with his tongue in his cheek and with a pretense of seriousness which excited the riability of the members.

He is the president of the Union for the League of Nations, the great British organization formed for the purpose of explaining the League of Nations and giving it substance in the minds of the British people.

He has recently protested to the Prime Minister and the British Minister of Foreign Affairs against the imperialism which Poland, a member of this very league, is now waging, without the protest of the league, against Russia, and without the slightest provocation—the most cold-blooded, dishonest war which has been waged in this generation, unless we except England's war against the Transvaal a few years ago.

The Foreign Minister first replied that it was too late for the League of Nations to act.

To this Lord Cecil answered that preparations which the Poles are making with American, French and British munitions were notorious for two months past, and that the League of Nations had plenty of time to stop it, if it was really intended that the league should be an instrument for stopping war, and not a hypocritical second Holy Alliance.

To this the Foreign Minister contented himself with saying that the League of Nations could do nothing.

Cecil then closed discussion by pointing out the specific clauses of the League of Nations which provided for just such situations.

Cecil said that the league was dying and that the allied governments were proving exactly what the opponents of the league had charged, namely, that it was nothing but a cloak under which the victors in the late war could divide up the earth without reference to any of the principles of justice or humanity or decency, and then call in, through the League of Nations, the whole neutral world to defend these robber nations against the revenge of the people who had been wronged—against the revenge, in truth, of two-thirds of the human race.

A few days ago came another witness. He is Austin Harrison, editor of the English Review, London, a distinguished man of letters, who regretfully confesses the failure of the League of Nations.

He, too, denounces the war which Poland is waging against Russia with the connivance of the American, French and English governments and with the assistance of munitions furnished by them.

He says: "I might if a more wicked war was started, for its objective is chaos and its motive Napoleonicism; and if the allies, when it is over, try to force the Poles to reason, they will be confronted with a D'Alema policy backed by Paris, of irreconcilable and Plutocratic, who is a Napoleonic soldier and declared imperialist—or actual bankrupt. Poland starts this war on an exchange (the worst in Europe) quoted at 74.55 marks to the pound (May 4), and cannot pay for her war supplies or budget except through the printing press."

He points out the fact that if the Poles should win through the war-weariness of Russia and the munitions of the allies, it will simply mean another world war in a short time, with 200,000,000 Russians added to the Germans and Austria-Hungarians, waiting for the hour of revenge. And if the Poles lose, Soviet Russia will have extended its boundaries by necessity till they touched Germany, and the whole scheme of separating Germany from Russia will have fallen.

Now comes the thunderbolt from the very author of the league, the man who drafted it and the most distinguished man whom the war produced, General Jan Smuts, the great South African soldier and statesman, who, in disgust and despair, exclaims:

"In Poland you have Marshal Pilsudski making war on Russia, though large parts of Poland are still in Russian hands. But, then, is the League of Nations doing that it cannot stop this? It ought to have said to Poland: 'This cannot be! It ought to have presented these operations, and yet the official version in the House of Commons is: "This is not a new war, but the old one." Great Britain was not consulted, and it is not a case for the league to interfere? Poland is an ally member of the League of Nations, and yet cannot be checked in this enterprise."

You cannot defeat Russia, as Napoleon learned that lesson, and now Denmark and Kolchak have learned it, too. Sooner or later Pilsudski will likewise learn the lesson. Then when Lenin and Trotsky are marching on Warsaw he will come to the league, perhaps, for help."

The League of Nations can be no better than those who will administer it, and those who will administer it are England and France.

America cannot join those two imperialistic nations with any self-respect and with any pretense of virtue while they are oppressing Ireland, India, Egypt, Persia, China, Russia and Austria-Hungary. You cannot keep company with a robber and share all his operations except the actual shooting and robbing of his victim, and not share his GUILT.

More Truth Than Poetry

Making Lothario Look Like a Piker
By S. E. KISER

WE used to wonder at Doc Bedell—"Doc" was a nickname, you understand. Wherever he lingered the ladies fell. He had them rating out of his hand.

He was not an Apollo, by any means; He wore store teeth and had little hair, But he captivated the would-be queens Where handsome men got the stony stare.

WE often attempted to dope it out; It surely was never his cleverness; There were those who frequently spoke about A secret power he might possess.

But that didn't seem to be sound or sane; His brow was low and his chin was weak; Still something about him caused every June To flutter whenever he heard him speak.

HE was chased by the brothers of silly chicks; He was threatened by many a husband, too, And, envied by all of the Toms and Dicks, The list of his conquests grew and grew.

Though his shoulders drooped and his legs were bowed, Lothario never was in his class; But a whirling sprang from the wind he sowed.

And the charmer will charm no more, alas! Now, since he is gone, it is all made clear, We have learned the secret he kept so well.

He was no wizard and not a seer, He cast no dark, mysterious spell; He charmed them not by his darning deeds, And not by any poetic plan.

He merely handed them strings of beads And lured them with silken lingerie.

Modern science is curing the insanity by searching out the physical troubles which cause insanity and correcting them. K. E. WARDEN, of the New Jersey State Hospital, has written for the Boston Sunday Advertiser a double-page account of the latest advances of medical science in this direction. He compares these methods with the alchemists' theories practiced upon the faces of every country only a few years ago.

Stop Plagues by Cleaning India

THE sacred cesspools of India are to be sterilized. The holy bathing places along the River Ganges, where thousands and thousands of natives, many of them suffering from contagious diseases, bathe daily, are to be made more sanitary. If the British government is able to overcome the religious prejudices of the Indians, sufficiently to carry out its plans without precipitating a holy war.

The Magazine Section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser describes in detail how this scheme of the British may succeed in wiping out the epidemic home of cholera, and improve the health of the entire world.

The witch, the biggest bird in the world and the one with the most marvellous brain, is really a remarkable creature. In the parish family, it is found, marriages are for life, no divorce is tolerated, and the male organ gets a severe beating if it refuses to do its share of egg hatching.

Interesting facts about this home-loving bird are told in the Boston Sunday Advertiser's Magazine Section.

Fred Vera Carpenter, a country store clerk, was blasted by a false rumor, died recently from a gunshot wound, accidentally inflicted by a double-barreled shotgun which he had betrayed her made her his lawful wife, and her death was happy. Vera Carpenter's story is one of the most pathetically tragic which have appeared in the recent years. Read about it in the Magazine Section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser on Sunday.

YE TOWNE GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.
By K. C. B.

OUTSIDE of my window, I LOOK upon trees. AND YESTERDAY NOTHING.

A STRANGE noise came, AND I opened my eyes. AND OUT in the east, WHERE THE sky went down.

BEHIND THE lines, OF THE faraway roofs, I COULD see the glow, OF THE coming sun, AND MY senses came, AND THE noise I heard, CAME OUT of the trees.

IN THE clattering talk, OF A flock of birds, AND I left my bed, AND SAT in a chair, THAT LOOKED right out AT the noisy birds.

AND SOME were gray, AND SOME were brown, AND SOME were black, AND SOME were mad, WHICH I could tell, FROM THEIR angry tones, AND IT seemed to me,

THAT ONE of the birds, WAS the chairman bird, FOR WHERE he sat, WAS THE point of attack AND THEY argued much AND ONE little bird, ON A far-ding branch, SEEMED to swear at times.

IT sounded so, AND THEY stayed out there, TILL THE sun came out, IN A great red ball, AND SUDDENLY, THEY CEASED to talk, AND IN little groups, THEY FLEW away, AND I'M wondering now, IF IT might not have been,

THEY WERE Republican birds, IN CONVENTION assembled, OR DEMOCRATIC birds, BECAUSE IT seemed to me,

THAT ONE or two birds, RAN the whole blamed show, WHILE THE others talked.

Recognition of the Irish Republic without intervention is all that the Irish people ask, and nothing less than a pledged commitment to this by the Democratic convention should satisfy the friends of the Irish Republic in America.

We seem bent on surfacing Ireland with sympathy. To England we gave men, money and munitions in her hour of need. Recognition of the Irish Republic without intervention is all that the Irish people ask, and nothing less than a pledged commitment to this by the Democratic convention should satisfy the friends of the Irish Republic in America.

A MAIDEN WHO HAS ARTISTIC SOUL

By Winifred Black

SHE wants to be an artist's model, and she has written to me asking how to get work at being one.

"I have an exquisitely moulded form," she says in the letter, "and I am very artistic temperament. I am very talented and have done artistic work. My work has been accepted and is highly praised in various stores, and I would like to go on with it, but they offer me such ridiculous prices that I cannot do it. How shall I get into my proper sphere?"

My dear, sweet, foolish little girl, your proper sphere is right home with your good, sensible mother, "who worries about you," you say. I don't blame her.

Artistic temperament! If I ever caught a girl of mine thinking "temperamental," I'd shut her up in a convent with a wall six feet high all around the place, and I'd keep her there till she came to her senses.

And your work, poor little girl—that "artistic" work you do so delightfully—what is it, tating or wool work?

They praise you at home and tell you you are "so artistic." Well, so you are, no doubt, within the limits. Why don't you stay in the limits and be happy?

Some day some nice young man will see you sitting on the porch embroidering a bureau scarf, and he'll think:

"There, she is the right kind of a girl! No tennis for her, or golf, or running around all hours of the twenty-four; but just a nice, quiet, neat, little soul who'll love to darn socks and look pleasant while she's doing it."

And he'll speak to you with a new note in his voice, and all at once you'll see what nice eyes he has and how broad his shoulders are, and you'll forget all about the "artistic temperament" and the things that go with it.

You'll find yourself walking up the aisle of a quiet little church some day to the old, old song the organ sings, and your little head will be whirling around with happiness, and you will have found your vocation, and the best vocation it is on earth, too.

Oh, yes, there's all right, the studio seat and the bohemian dinners, and the "art for art's sake" jargons for a while, but any one who really grows up grows away from all that sort of thing some day, and then—what?

Letters to the Editor

Recognition, Not Sympathy
Editor Boston American:

A well-known Boston Democratic leader "resting" at French lick, Ind., is reported in local newspaper dispatches to have said that "an expression of sympathy for the cause of Ireland (finer in the Democratic platform) would help the Democratic ticket in November."

William's friends in the East and elsewhere, who have repeatedly seen the politicians play tag with the struggles of an enslaved people for liberty, should at once make it plain to Democratic delegates gathered at San Francisco that expressions of sympathy have passed the stage of usefulness. They are not and the millions of Irish men, women and children and the other crimes against humanity being perpetrated today in Ireland by England's invading army.

LARGE TASK TO DEFINE WHAT IS BEAUTY

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I have been reading your article in the American with great interest and pleasure. I have often read that among the various and diverse topics you write about not once was there an article on the appreciation of beauty, or the gratitude of the emotions. For instance, some people do not appreciate music, however excellent. Another typical case may be the failure to differentiate between a person who is beautiful and one who is the contrary. Kindly explain the difference in a 'Lover of Education.'"

YOU should read works on aesthetics—the science, or philosophy, of beauty—to see what an immense field of discussion your question opens up. It is a field sprinkled thick with flowers; flowers of rhetoric, flowers of poetry and the imagination, besides some that have an odor of science.

Plato will set your mind afloat amidst abstractions; Aristotle will give you more definite suggestions; Burke, in his "Discourse on the Sublime and Beautiful," will be very specific and tell you what are the elements of beauty—(1) smallness; (2) smoothness; (3) gradual variation of direction in gentle curves; (4) delicacy; or the appearance of fragility; (5) brightness, purity and softness of color.

But then Kant will upset you again by affirming that we cannot make a valid and universal judgment to the effect that "all objects possessing such and such qualities are beautiful." Beauty "according to him, is not objective, but is subjective, and valid only for the person who constitutes the judgment. He also asserts that an object which one person pronounces beautiful is fitted to please all men."

Now Turn to Hume

Having meditated upon this, you may turn to Hume and accept his affirmation that beauty is no quality existing in the things themselves, but is something in the mind which contemplates the things.

Theories of the nature of beauty have been advanced under two heads: (1) Formalism, which maintains that beauty consists in the form of the objects, and (2) Expressionism, which explains beauty as an instinct, i.e., expression of an emotional state of mind. The latter theory is being understood in its widest sense, and (2) Expressionism, which explains beauty as an instinct, i.e., expression of an emotional state of mind.

While in certain regards there is a broad agreement between the two schools of thought, yet this does not prohibit the existence of divergent theories. In some cases it is an absolute contradiction or opposition.

It is not necessary in order to find such contradictions to compare the ideas of savages and civilized men, or those of people of widely different types of civilization, for they may be met with any day in public places. The painted faces of young girls, now so lamentably common, doubtless appear beautiful to those who bear them, and to those who imitate, although to your eyes, as to mine, they may be repellant. Fashion is so great a tyrant even that it has made it seem as if the unrefined tastes of the masses its unrelenting slaves.

Perception of beauty is primarily an exercise of the emotions, but still it is subject to control by rational judgment. The mind may store up stores of memory, may even reflect, or project, beauty upon an object before it, but it must be guided by a fine diamond and consider whether its beauty of prismatic color is not mentally heightened by your knowledge of its great intellectual value, or the wonderful refractive properties possessed by a bit of crystallized carbon.

Limits of Beauty
What are the limits within which beauty is confined? If there be any, is beauty properly restricted to the field of the "two higher senses"—sight and hearing, or is it not the delight imparted by a delicate perfume akin to what we call beauty? In other words, may there not be as beautiful in its fragrance as in its color and form, and is the word "beauty" misapplied when thus used?

The difference is in range, not in kind. Smelling and hearing act at a distance and have a broad field, but emotionally smelted, touched, globe, or a soft fur, is exquisitely "beautiful" to the appreciative hand which grasps or fondles it. Those who cannot appreciate beauty are those whose senses are dull, and their attitude as well.
